Donald Sultan Button Down Modernism

Exhibition 20 January - 1 April 2017

Red Button Flower July 28 2016 2016, Enamel on masonite, 183 x 183 cm

DONALD SULTAN

Ich freue mich ausserordentlich, Donald Sultan mit Button Down Modernism in einer weiteren Einzelausstellung hier in Zürich zu zeigen. Der Ausnahmekünstler der zeitgenössischen US-amerikanischen Kunst war zuletzt 2014 in unserer Galerie zu Gast. Donald Sultan wird im Moment in Amerika mit einer Ausstellung seiner Disaster Paintings gebührend gewürdigt. Die breit angelegte Wanderausstellung, die im Lowe Art Museum in Miami eröffnet wurde, wird im Modern Art Museum of Fort Worth fortgesetzt und anschliessend in weiteren amerikanischen Museen zu sehen sein.

Die komplexe Technik, für die er Industriematerialien wie Teer, Lackfarbe, Spachtelmasse und Linoleumplatten verwendet, steht in spannungsvollem Kontrast zu Donald Sultans einfacher Ikonographie. Auch in seinen jüngsten Werken, den Button Flowers, verwendet er konsequent diese markante Bildsprache. Die Künstlichkeit der flächigen Blumen mit Knopflöchern anstelle von Staubgefassen verweist auf die serielle Herstellung von Gütern in hochtechnisierten Gesellschaften. Zugleich reflektiert der Künstler mit seinen abstrahierten Formen, deren Farben die Palette Piet Mondrians zitieren, über das Ende der Moderne und ihren kulturellen Idealismus.

Mit den Knöpfen übernimmt Donald Sultan aber auch ein Motiv, mit dem er sich bereits vor 20 Jahren beschäftigt hat. Daher freut es mich besonders, ihnen in dieser Ausstellung mit Eleven Buttons July 3, 1996 eines der wundervollen Teerbilder aus jener Zeit zeigen zu dürfen.

Vor etwas mehr als 20 Jahren, genau mit diesen Button Paintings, habe ich Donald Sultans Werk kennengelernt und ihn als Künstler und Person schätzen gelernt. Seit 1996 sind wir in professioneller Zusammenarbeit verbunden. Daraus ist über die Jahre auch eine tiefe Freundschaft gewachsen. Für beides möchte ich mich beim Künstler herzlich bedanken.

Viele erfolgreiche Projekte sind aus dieser Zusammenarbeit hervorgegangen. Meine Faszination für sein Werk hat sich in all den Jahren nicht verringert. Daher freue ich mich sehr, mit dieser Ausstellung meine Begeisterung für diesen herausragenden amerikanischen Künstler an Sie weiter geben zu dürfen.

DONALD SULTAN

It is with the greatest pleasure that I extend a warm „welcome back to Zürich“ to Donald Sultan. After his previous solo exhibition here in 2014, Galerie Andres Thalmann is proud to present Button Down Modernism, an exhibition that includes several recent works by this extraordinary contemporary American artist.

Sultan is currently being honoured in the U.S. with a touring exhibition of his Disaster Paintings. The show opened at the Lowe Art Museum in Miami, Florida; its next stage will be the Modern Art Museum of Fort Worth, Texas, before it travels on to several other major U.S. art museums.

Industrial materials such as tar, enamel paint, gesso or spackle and linoleum tiles, form part of Sultan's complex technique that stands in thrilling contrast to his powerful, reductionist yet expansive iconography. A perfect example can be found in his most recent series, Button Flowers, in which holes represent stamens. They evoke the mass production of goods in our highly mechanised and technological world. At the same time, the abstract shapes and the colour palette borrowed from Piet Mondrian also hint at the artist's reflection on the end of Modernism and of cultural idealism.

The „buttons“ also revert to a subject that Sultan addressed two decades ago. It therefore gives me particular pleasure to present in this exhibition one of Sultan's wonderful tar paintings from that period, Eleven Buttons July 3, 1996.

Some twenty years ago, it was precisely Sultan's Button Paintings that drew my attention to the artist. From the day in 1996 when I had the pleasure of meeting him in person, I have greatly appreciated working with him in my professional capacity. Many successful projects have seen the light of day since then. Not only has my fascination for his work never diminished but we have also become friends. I would like to express my sincere thanks to Donald Sultan for this enriching experience.

It now gives me the greatest pleasure to share with you my enthusiasm for the works by this outstanding U.S. artist.

Donald Sultan

Button Down Modernism

Button Down Modernism - der Titel der Ausstellung klingt nach sportiven Oberhemden und Geschäftigkeit und enthält auf verbaler Ebene bereits vieles von jenem Anspielungsreichtum, der das Werk Donald Sultans so vielschichtig und unwiderstehlich macht.

Blumen, Früchte und Naturmotive spielen in Sultans Werk eine tragende Rolle und werden dabei zu Mittlern von Reflexionen über Kunstgeschichte und Zeitgeist. Mit seinen Bildwerken hat Donald Sultan (* 1951 in Asheville, North Carolina, lebt und arbeitet in New York) sich als einer der wichtigsten Erneuerer der us-amerikanischen Malerei in die Kunstwelt eingeschrieben. Seine Arbeiten befinden sich in den Sammlungen internationaler Museen wie dem Metropolitan Museum of Modern Art in New York, dem Centre Pompidou in Paris und der Tate Gallery in London. Für sein Schaffen wurde Donald Sultan mit zahlreichen Würdigungen und drei Ehrendoktortiteln ausgezeichnet.

Mit gelben und schwarzen Lemons begann für Donald Sultan Mitte der 1980er Jahre die intensive Beschäftigung mit Naturmotiven, und damit eine Neubelebung des Genres der Stillleben und Blumenstücke mit all seinen kunsthistorischen und philosophischen Implikationen. Den Anstoß gab die Auseinandersetzung mit dem Werk Eduard Manets, insbesondere mit dessen Gemälde Le Citron von 1880/81. In grossen Bildzyklen wie den Oranges und Morning Glories hat Sultan seine Beschäftigung mit Naturmotiven kontinuierlich weiter getrieben, und dabei eine Bildsprache entwickelt, die reduziert und plakativ auf den Symbolcharakter des Dargestellten verweist. Auf der Materialebene bedient Sultan sich bei Bau- und Handwerksstoffen wie Linoleum, Teer, Emaille. Die Verwendung dieser Werkstoffe ist zum Markenzeichen des Künstlers geworden.

Stillleben und Blumenstücke sind in der zeitgenössischen Kunst wenig präsent. Zuvor aber galten sie als ideale Motive, um malerisches Können und kompositorische Raffinesse zu beweisen und um Fragen nach Wahrnehmung und Darstellungsweise, Farbwirkung und Form sowie nach Lebensphilosophie reflektieren zu können. So reizt Donald Sultan an der Darstellung von Blumen, dass sie eng «verflochten sind mit der Sprache der menschlichen Emotionen und der Sprache der Kunst». Der Künstler denkt dabei an Redewendungen wie die Blüte der Jugend oder die blühende Gesundheit. Die Kunst nutzt die Blume um Jugend, Lebenskraft und Schönheit, aber auch Vergänglichkeit zu thematisieren. Donald Sultan geht einen entscheidenden Schritt weiter und lädt die Blume mit Verweisen auf Kunst- und Zeitgeschichte auf.

Dies geschieht zum einen durch Sultans ungewöhnliche und komplexe Technik. Donald Sultan verarbeitet Industriematerialien wie Teer, Lackfarbe, Spachtelmasse und Linoleumplatten. Gemeinsam mit der flächig-reduzierten Gestaltung der Motive, die an die Ikonographie der Pop Art und der Werbegrafik erinnert, verweist die Materialität der Werke auf die serielle Herstellung von Naturgütern in hochtechnisierten Gesellschaften und die Künstlichkeit, die somit auch einer Blume innewohnen kann. In Donald Sultans aktueller Serie, den Button Flowers wird dieses Moment des Künstlichen noch gesteigert, indem die plakativen Blüten mit Knopflöchern statt Staubgefassen versehen sind.

Sprechend ist auch Sultans Farbwahl. Für die Button Flowers verwendet er Lacke in mattem Aquamarinblau oder dotterigem Gelb – Farbtöne, die um 1959 für Automobile verwendet wurden. Heute sind diese Farbtöne aus dem Strassenleben verschwunden, was den Bildern eine leicht nostalgische Färbung gibt. Die grossen Lack-Blumen auf Hartfaserplatten erinnern an eine Zeit des fröhlichen Fortschrittglaubens. Ebenso die geometrisch gemusterten Hintergründe, «die leicht ein Hemd oder eine Jacke sein könnten», wie Sultan selbst sagt. Doch diese Hintergrundmuster sind mehr, sie evozieren Gemälde Piet Mondrians, des legendären De Stijl-Gründers, der in seiner strengen Kunst eine Kraft sah, die «die alten Formen von Staat, Religion und Familie zerstören und neue, einfachere und bessere erschaffen würde.» So erlauben die Button Flowers einen Blick durchs Knopfloch der jüngeren Geschichte auf die euphorischen Zukünfte der jüngeren Vergangenheit und zugleich auf die Glanzlosigkeit, die dem Begriff Zukunft heute anhaftet.

Donald Sultan Button Down Modernism

Evoking sportswear and activity, the exhibition title Button Down Modernism implies the wide range of associations that have rendered Donald Sultan's work so complex and compelling.

Born 1951 in Asheville, North Carolina, the artist now lives and works in New York city. Conveying his reflections on art history and the zeitgeist, the flowers, fruit and other subjects taken from nature play a key part in works that have assured him a stellar place among U.S.-American painting's august innovators. Sultan has received numerous accolades and awards, including three honorary doctorates; his works feature in major international museums and galleries, including the Metropolitan Museum of Modern Art in New York, Centre Pompidou in Paris, France, and Tate Modern in London, UK.

Inspired by his study of Edouard Manet's works, in particular the 1880/81 painting Le Citron, Sultan embarked on his own exploration of nature. His mid-1980s piece, Lemons, initiated a revival of the floral still-life – with all the art-historical and philosophical implications associated with the genre. Since then, Sultan has been consistently concerned with subjects taken from nature. In several major cycles, including Oranges and Morning Glories, the artist has developed a strikingly reduced visual idiom that underscores the symbolism in his works. Moreover, the use of industrial materials has become his trademark.

Quite rare in contemporary art, the still-life, especially of flowers, was once considered an ideal vehicle for artists to convey their painterly skills and eye for composition, and to explore issues of perception and representation, form, colour and technique, as well as philosophical questions.

Sultan's interest in flower paintings resides in the fact that, as he has said, flowers are 'intertwined with both the language of the human sensibility and the language of art.' In idiomatic expressions such as 'rosy-cheeked' or 'fresh as a daisy', as well as 'pushing up the daisies', flowers symbolise beauty, youth and vigour, as well as transience and death. In his paintings, however, with their references to history and art history, Sultan has added a crucial new element to the flower metaphor.

On the one hand, this is due to his unusual and complex technique involving the use of industrial materials such as tar, enamel paint, gesso or spackle and linoleum tiles or MDF panels. Alongside an expansive yet reductionist approach to his subject matter reminiscent of Pop-art and advertising iconography, the physical materiality of these works evokes the mass production of goods – including artificial flowers – in our highly mechanised and technological world. A perfect example can be found in his most recent series, Button Flowers, in which the holes in the 'buttons' represent stamens.

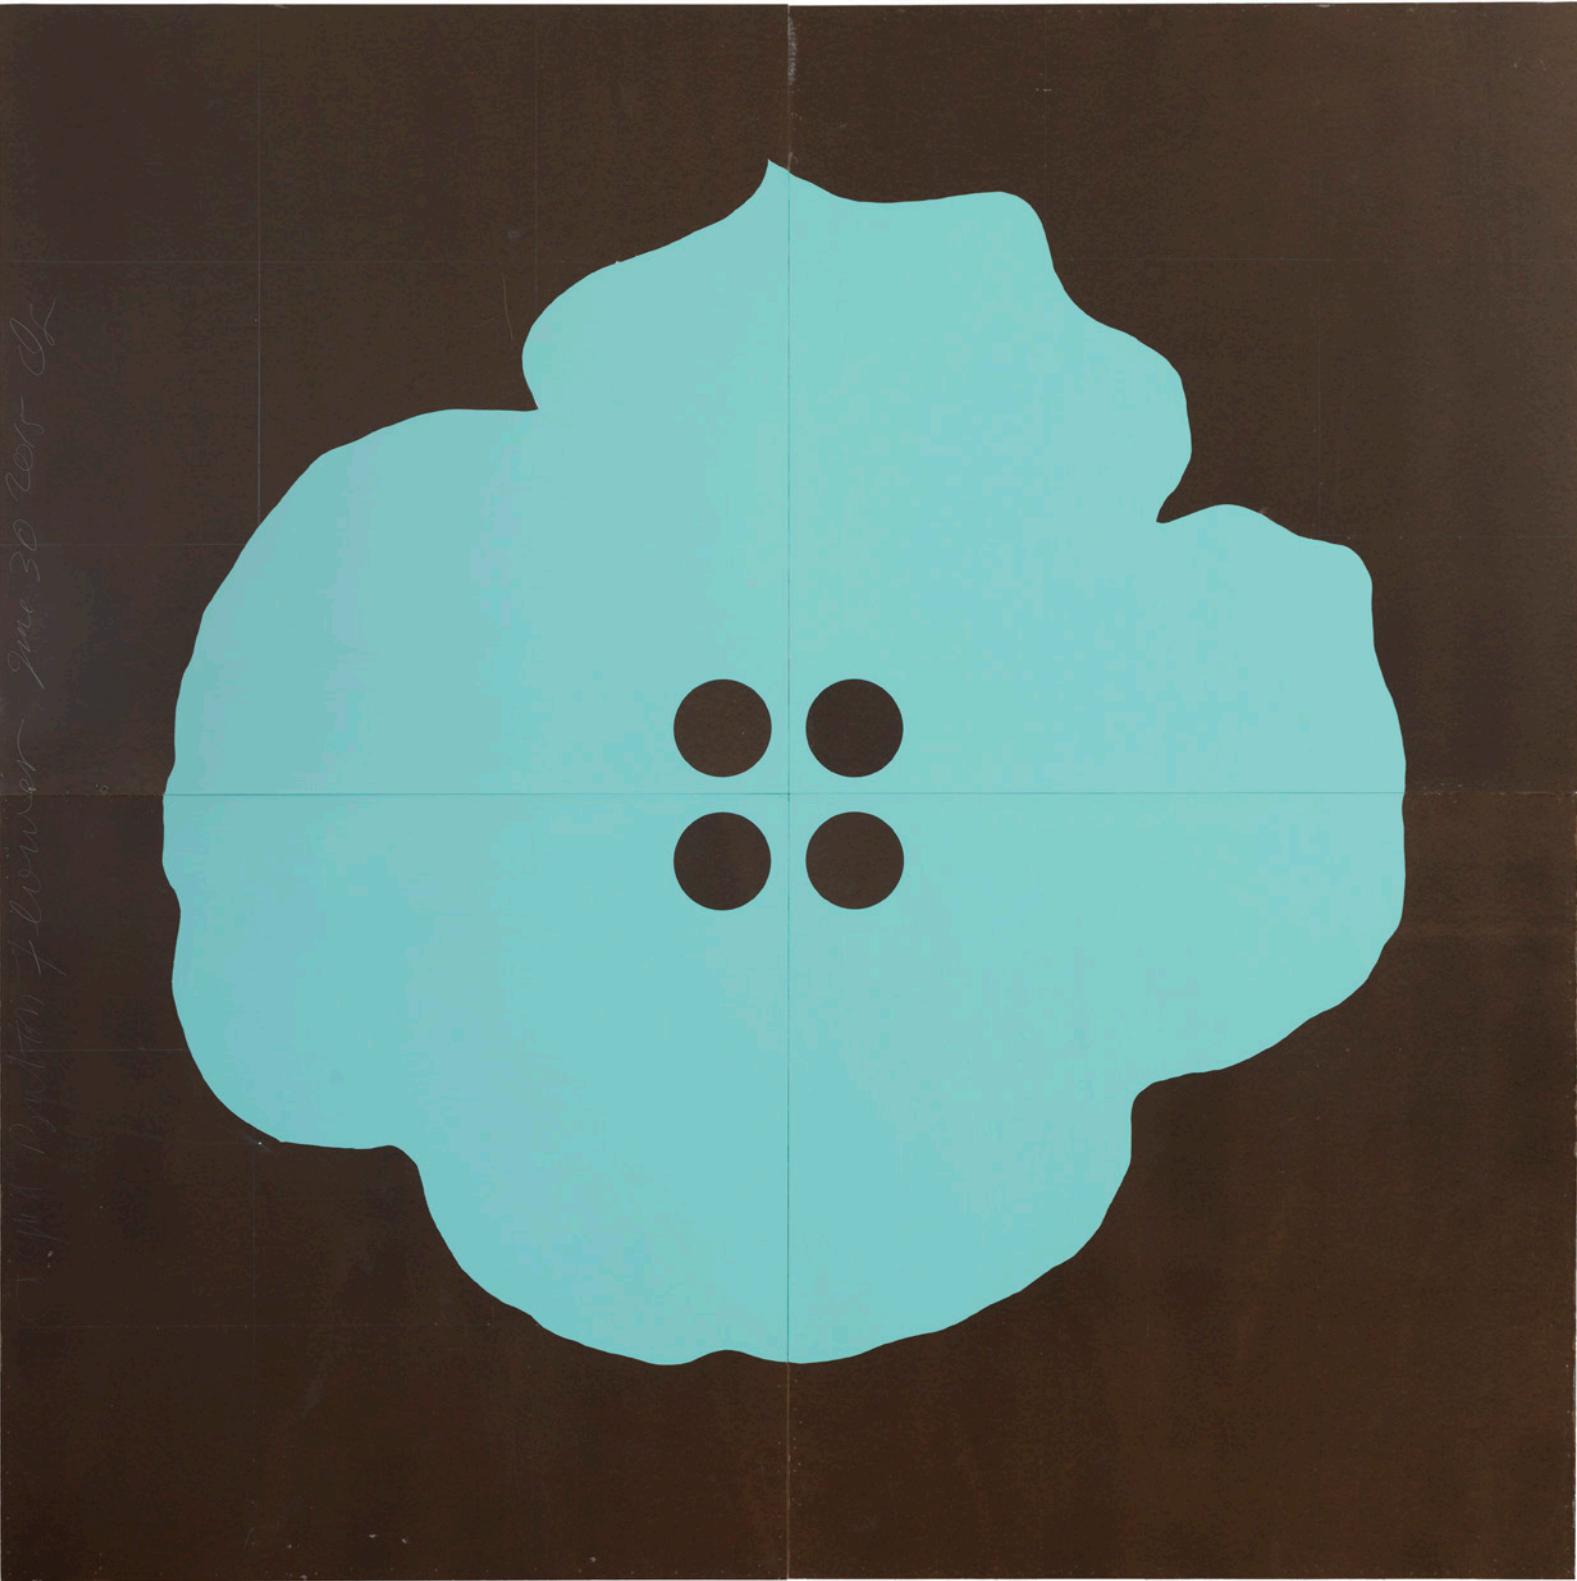

Sultan's choice of paint and colour constitutes another key element. In the Button Flowers he has used matte aquamarine or egg-yolk yellow enamel paint. The colours, popular for cars in the late 1950s but rather less so today, add to the large-scale 'flowers' a hint of nostalgia, evoking an era of progress and optimism.

The artist has also commented on the 'iconic button, against or concealing a geometric painting or pattern that could easily be a shirt or a jacket.' More than that, however, the patterns in the background also evoke works by Piet Mondrian, the legendary founder of De Stijl, who believed that his austere art style 'would end up destroying the old forms of state, religion and family ... creating new, simpler and better ones.'

The holes in Sultan's Button Flowers afford not only a glimpse of the fabulous futures that were imaginable in the not-too-distant past, but also of our more muted expectations of what the future may hold.

BIOGRAPHY

Red Poppies Oct 11 2016 2016, Conte on paper, 57 x 76 cm

Born in 1951 in Asheville, North Carolina, Donald Sultan received his BFA from the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill and his MFA from the School of the Art Institute in Chicago. He moved to New York in 1975. The work of Donald Sultan is voluminous and varied. Since his first one-man show in 1977, he has enjoyed a distinguished career as painter, printmaker, and sculptor. His extensive body of work has placed him at the forefront of contemporary art, where he has become best known for his ability to successfully merge the best of yesterday's artistic tradition with a fresh, unique approach to imagery and materials.

Although his paintings fit into the criteria of a still life, Sultan describes these works as first and foremost abstract. The largeness of Sultan's compositions, huge pieces of fruit, flowers, dominoes and other objects, set against the stark, unsettling tar-black, eight-foot square background, dominate the viewer. He is best known for his lemons and fruit, and states that his subjects develop from previous work. The oval-blossomed charcoal tulips of the 80s became his immediately recognisable black lemons. Dots from dice have become oranges. What does not change with Sultan's work is the powerful statement his forms make. Sultan's work incorporates basic geometric and organic forms with a formal purity that is both subtle and monumental. His images are weighty, with equal emphasis on both negative and positive areas. Sultan describes his work as „heavy structure, holding fragile meaning“ with the ability to „turn you off and turn you on at the same time.“ Sultan's still lifes have been described as studies in contrast. His powerfully sensual, fleshy object representations are rendered through a labor-intensive and singular method.

Sultan has been given numerous exhibitions dedicated to his work, as well as having been included in a number of group shows. His work is included in the permanent collection of many prestigious institutions including The Museum of Modern Art, the Dallas Museum of Art, and the Metropolitan Museum of Art. A monograph of Sultan's 30 year career was published in 2008, entitled, Donald Sultan: The Theatre of the Object and in 2010, Sultan was honoured with the North Carolina award, the highest award a state can bestow upon a civilian.
